

Accounting and CFO Support Practice

In many quarters, the CFO position is now considered to be the most challenging job in corporate America. The ever-changing regulatory landscape, increased outside scrutiny into all aspects of the corporation, the potential risk to the CFO's personal wealth and reputation, and the more aggressive pursuit of corporate issues by prosecutors, have added to an already demanding position. As a result, CFOs need to augment their organizations with highly-skilled resources that they can be confident will resolve a particular issue.

CRC consultants have consistently demonstrated that they are the go-to people when big issues arise. Our consultants have been CFOs, senior finance staffers, turnaround specialists, and problem solvers; they are the people that issues are handed to, with full confidence that a practical solution will be developed.
